1. On the occasion of the strike of Italian Government employees, the Confederazione Italiana Sindacati Nazionali Lavoratori (CISNAL; Italian Confederation of National Syndicated Workers) held a meeting in the Teatro Adriano at Rome. Approximately 100 persons participated at this meeting, during which Giuseppe Landi and Christian Democratic Deputy Domenico Letanza spoke. During the course of their speeches, they followed closely the syndical line and only occasionally accused the Government of political factionalism with regard to the workers of "nationalist" tendency and of still maintaining the persecutorial laws with regard to a minority of the citizens who deserve better and are guilty only of having served their country with all of their strength.
2. Landi denounced the obstructionist work of the Government and other syndical organizations which have prevented the CISNAL from holding top-rank position in the negotiations for the resolution of the claims of the State employees. According to him, such obstructionism is obviously unjustifiable, especially insofar as it comes from the other syndical organizations, because this fact in the final analysis constitutes another obstacle to the achievement of much-desired unity of the labor forces.
3. In the field of syndical problems regarding the agitation of the State employees, both speakers bitterly criticized the decidedly unfavorable treatment which, under the application of the new laws, would be the lot of the subordinate personnel and of the lesser employees in relation to those of higher grade. They stated that the justification adopted by the Government in this regard did not have any basis, at least from the syndical point of view. Letanza pointed out, in fact, that it was necessary to note that in 1938 the employees of the higher grades received pay which was adequate to the real cost of living at that time, while all the other employees of the State receive pay which, while not exactly starvation wages, was certainly not commensurate with their needs.
